Jim White to conduct two training sessions at 2012 National Training Institute

DALLAS – The National Joint Apprenticeship and Training Committee will provide an intense, week-long training session at the National Training Institute in Ann Arbor, Mich., July 29 – August 3, 2012.

The NJATC is the training arm of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Each year at this event they provide training and the latest technologies in the electrical industry to approximately 5000 union electricians from across the country. Shermco Industries' training director, Jim White, will present two training sessions this year: "Electrical Safety-related Work Practices" and "Overcurrent Protection."

"This event is a gathering of the best union electricians in the country. I am honored to provide training at NTI and am very much looking forward to it," said White.
